

Instructor: Date:

Learner: Regional Branch:

Program: Center:

CONTENT

• Let's Start! • Let's Explore! • Let's Practice! • Extension Activity • Target Words • Learning Points

Let's Start!

Giving someone the cold shoulder!

Learning Outcome

Describe emotions and feelings in present and past situations in spoken or written texts and in work and social contexts.

Ask your partner:

- What do you do when you are angry at someone?
- What do you think people should do when they get angry?
- What do you do to avoid getting angry?

Can Do Statements

- I can talk about beliefs, opinions, relationships or character traits.
- I can express comparison between two things or events.
- I can express annoyance about an action or an event in the past.

Let's Explore!

She has been giving me the cold shoulder all night.

* When you give someone "the cold shoulder", you ignore them.

Instructions: Read the text aloud.

- Amy: Ok. Peter spit it out. You were giving me the cold shoulder all through lunch and all the way home. What's eating you? Is it the trip?
- Peter: Yes, it's the trip. You might have given me a heads up before lunch today.
- Amy: I'm sorry about that. Unfortunately, I didn't really know for sure until today. Candace is as secretive as she is intelligent.
- Peter: But you had an idea?
- Amy: Well, Candace and I may have had some correspondence about it back and forth, but nothing was made official until today.
- Peter: What about your clients?
- Amy: Some of them I will reschedule, the others I will refer to another person in the office. You are more upset than I expected about this.
- Peter: I'm angry actually. You could have informed me a little earlier so we could have had a discussion about this.
- Amy: What is to discuss?
- Peter: Us! Our relationship. Sometimes I feel I am more serious about this relationship than you are.
- Amy: Peter. We've been dating for a month. You have known about my volunteering since we started going out. This is something that I do. This may be less lucrative than my other job, but rest assured it is much more rewarding and important.
- Peter: I may have known about your volunteering, but I just wish I could have been a part of your decision to go to Africa.
- Amy: I'm sorry Peter, but at this time, you don't get to be a part of my decision process as it pertains to my life, and if you think you do, then maybe you are not as thoughtful as I thought you were.
- Peter: Thoughtful as going off to Africa without talking it over with your boyfriend?
- Amy: I'm going to go now. I'll call you tomorrow and we'll talk again. Ok?
- Peter: Ok.

Let's Practice!

Peter and Amy have an argument.

Instructions: Read the sentences. Write the correct form of the comparative clause. Use the words in parentheses to complete the sentences.

- 1) Sometimes I feel I am _____ (serious) about this relationship than you are.
- 2) You are _____ (upset) I expected about this.
- 3) Candace is _____ (secretive) I am.
- 4) This may be _____ (less/lucrative) my other job, but rest assured it is much more rewarding and important.

Let's Practice!

Amy and Peter decide to call it a day*.

*When you "call it a day" you stop working.

Instructions: Select the correct answer. Practice saying the complete sentences aloud with your partner. Correct each other.

- 1) You _____ given me a heads up before lunch today.
 - a) might had
 - b) might has
 - c) might have
- 2) Candace and I _____ some correspondence about it back and forth.
 - a) may has had
 - b) may have had
 - c) may had has
- 3) You could _____ me a little earlier.
 - a) have inform
 - b) have informing
 - c) have informed
- 4) I _____ about your volunteering, but I just wish I could have been a part of your decision to go to Africa.
 - a) may have knew
 - b) may have know
 - c) may have known

Extension Activity

Researching idioms about anger and annoyance.

Instructions: Complete the following steps. Fill in the Self-Assessment.

- With a partner, research four idioms or expressions about anger or annoyance.
- Make a PowerPoint presentation.
- Your presentation should include the idiom and the meaning as well as images to help people understand the idiom better.
- Use the idioms in a sentence or in a conversation.
- Present your PowerPoint to the class.
- The presentation should be about 5 minutes in length.
- Create a unique way to test your classmates after about the idioms they just heard.

Self-Assessment

Yes

No

I research four idioms about anger and annoyance.

☐ ☐

I create a PowerPoint presentation.

☐ ☐

I explain my idioms clearly and concisely.

☐ ☐

I use my idioms in sentences or conversations to help better explain.

☐ ☐

I create a unique way to test my classmates knowledge.

☐ ☐

Target Words

- spit it out (expression): used to urge someone to say or confess something quickly
e.g. Ok. Peter spit it out.
- what's eating you? (expression): what is annoying or bothering you?
e.g. What's eating you? Is it the trip?
- heads up (expression): advance notice
e.g. You might have given me a heads up before lunch today.
- lucrative (adjective): making a large amount of money
e.g. This may be less lucrative than my other job.
- rest assured (expression): to be certain that something will happen
e.g. Rest assured it is much more rewarding.
- rewarding (adjective): providing satisfaction; gratifying
e.g. It is much more rewarding and important.

Learning Points

The Comparative Clause: Degree

Comparisons express differences or similarities based on a judgement or standard of measurement.

When you use comparative clauses, your English sounds more dynamic and mature.

You introduce adverbial clauses of comparison of degree with the subordinating conjunction than, or by the relative adverb as.

For example:

I am older than my brother.
He doesn't work harder than we do.
My mother earns more than my father.
He is as smart as he is handsome.

Comparative	Meaning	Example
as ... as	The same	They are as tall as each other.
-er than	More	He is better than his brother at soccer. more than	Much	Kelly has done more than her share of the cleaning.
less than	Fewer	Susan has done less than the others in the group. further than	Farther	The team had been pushed further than the other teams combined.
the more ... the more	Increasing at the same time/rate	The more things change the more things stay the same.

Examples:

- Sometimes I feel I am more serious about this relationship than you are.
- You are more upset than I expected about this.
- Candace is as secretive as she is intelligent.
- This may be less lucrative than my other job, but rest assured it is much more rewarding and important.

Learning Points

Modals to Express Annoyance in the Past

When you want to express annoyance and criticism about the past, you can use modals. Modals such as could, might, should, ought to, and would not add meaning to the main verb and can convey annoyance when you use them properly.

When you talk about annoyance in the past, you use the modal + have + past participle. Let's look at some modals and their meanings:

1. Could have / Might have - when you want to show you are finding fault with someone's actions

You could have said something.

We might have been told.

2. Could have / Might have - when you want to show that you are annoyed

You might have apologized for what you did.

She could have RSVP'd, at least.

3. Should have / Ought to have - to criticize the choice the other person made

You should have gone to the doctor.

They ought to have finished construction by now!

You should have submitted your project on time.

4. Would not have - when you say that your choice of what to do in a situation wasn't the same as another person's

It wouldn't have hurt him to pay for the dinner.

Examples:

- You might have given me a heads up before lunch today.
- Candace and I may have had some correspondence about it back and forth.
- You could have informed me a little earlier.
- I may have known about your volunteering, but I just wish I could have been a part of your decision to go to Africa.

