Let's Start!

Taking a chance!

Learning Outcome

Express duty, advice, willingness, or intention to do something in spoken or written texts and in work and social contexts.

Can Do Statements

- I can talk about beliefs, opinions, relationships or character traits.
- I can express uncertainty about past events.
- I can express willingness and intention.

Ask your partner:

- When was the last time you took a big chance? Did it pay off?
- What kind of chances are worth taking? Which ones are not worth taking? Why not?

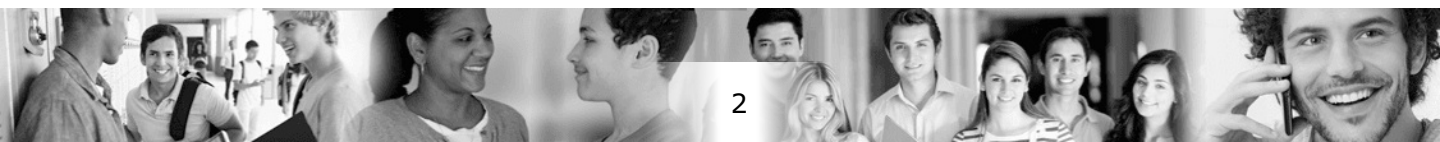

Let's Explore!

My brother is very content with how his life has turned out.

* To be "content" means to be satisfied and happy with something.

Instructions: Read the text aloud.

Bill: Hey, Vanessa!
Vanessa: Hi, Bill. Sorry.
Bill: You must not have gotten much sleep last night - you look tired.
Vanessa: Lots to think about. What do you have there, Bill?
Bill: Two tickets to paradise.
Vanessa: More to think about. Listen, Bill. This might not be a good idea.
Bill: I shouldn't have waited as long as I did to ask you out, but if I had asked you earlier, would you have said yes?
Vanessa: Bill, I don't know. I might have done that. Yes.
Bill: Well, I'm asking you now. Here is the ticket.
Vanessa: No, I can't. I can't take that.
Bill: Here is the ticket. The departure time is on it. I'll wait for you at a pub called O'Malley's. I'll wait for you up until boarding time, but I won't wait a second more. I'm going and I would like you to come with me.
Vanessa: Why?
Bill: My father and I didn't have a good relationship. He could have helped me with my homework, he could've played games with me, but what he would do is give great pearls of wisdom from time to time. One day, unanticipatedly, he said, "Son, in life. You have to know when to roll the dice." I don't know why, but that has always stayed with me and for whatever reason, so far in my life I've known when to roll the dice. I knew when to do it when investing, I took a chance on hiring you and look how that worked out for me. And now, I'm rolling the dice on you again.
Vanessa: Bill, who is going to run the place?
Bill: I already talked to the partners. They are going to take care of everything.
Vanessa: Bill, those guys are inexperienced and careless. We both know this.
Bill: You're stalling now. I'll see you Friday. Is that your friend Peter over there?
Vanessa: Yes.
Bill: He looks content.
Peter: So what happened?
Vanessa: He gave me a ticket to the Maldives.
Peter: Wow! Are you going to go?
Vanessa: No!

Let's Practice!

Bill tries to entice* Vanessa.

*"Entice" means to tempt someone.

Learning Points

Perfect Modals - Review

You use Perfect modals to talk about what was advisable in the past. The form of Perfect modals is: modal + have + past participle.

The following is a list of the Perfect modals and their meanings:
p.p.= Past participle of the verb

Could have + p.p. - This structure is used to talk about something that you had the chance to do, but you didn't do. Also, to speculate about the past.

I could have been a better student in French class.
My stomach is upset - it could have been the sushi.

Should have + p.p. - This structure is used to talk about regrets.

I shouldn't have eaten that sushi - now I feel sick!

Must have + p.p. - We use this structure to talk about something that you are almost certain happened.

You must have gone to bed late last night - you look tired!

Might/May have + p.p. - We use this structure to talk about something that was possible, but you are not sure.

The sushi might have been the reason you got sick.

Would have + p.p. - We use this structure to talk about an action that did not happen.

If it had been sunny, we would have gone to the beach.

Examples:

- You must not have gotten much sleep last night - you look tired.
- I shouldn't have waited as long as I did to ask you out.
- If I had asked you out earlier, would you have said yes?
- I might have done that.
- He could have helped me with my homework, he could've played games with me.

Learning Points

Expressing Willingness and Intention

You usually use will and won't to talk about the future. However, they do have another function - to express a willingness or an unwillingness to do something.

In the present: will and won't

You can use will to say that someone is willing to do something. In other words, they are ready to do something.

For example:

My neighbor is great - she will always watch over my house when I'm away.

You can use won't to express unwillingness to do something.

For example:

I won't help you study - you have to do it yourself.

In the past: would and wouldn't

When you want to express the fact that someone was generally (not for one action) willing to do something in past, you can use would.

For example:

My neighbor was really nice - she would always watch over our house when we were away.

You can use wouldn't to talk about something (both generally and specifically) that someone was unwilling to do in the past.

For example:

I was late for the show because my car wouldn't start. (specific)

My dad wouldn't help with the dishes, but he would help with the cooking. (general)

Examples:

- I'll wait for you at a pub called O'Malley's.*
- I'll wait for you up until boarding time.*
- I won't wait a second more.
- What he would do is give great pearls of wisdom from time to time.
- My dad wouldn't help me with my homework.
